2. Trends noted during the reporting period included the following:

a. Since the first of the year, three GSA/Guard applicants have refused to take a polygraph test, each giving as his reason that working at Langley is undesirable because of travel hardships. This travel may be indicative of general knowledge among Guard applicants that a Langley assignment can be avoided by simply refusing to take the polygraph test.

b. Special correspondence continued to increase sharply, with receipt of 415 items as compared to 357 items during the last reporting period and 194 the previous month.

3. Highlights noted during the reporting period included the following:

d. A security review and appropriate coordination with other Agency components was completed with regard to an article written by a former Staff Employee involving a controversy over Viet Cong Order of Battle statistics during the Viet Nam conflict. The article was prepared for publishing in Harpers Magazine.
